

PROEAR 2000™

PROEAR 2000™ system offers a high quality and cost effective solution to a common and often vexing problem experienced by almost everybody involved with diving. For many, ear infections and discomfort from water pressure affect the ability to enjoy diving more often than any other health issue. Many divers even find they must interrupt expensive, long awaited diving explorations as a result of ear problems.

PROEAR 2000™ is the world's only practical ear protector for divers, designed and developed by diving physicians, engineers and instructors in order to enhance diver safety and comfort.

The unique design and performance of PROEAR 2000™ allow divers to keep their ears dry, thereby:

- Improving diver comfort and preventing painful ear problems
- Improving hearing and sense of direction underwater
- Simplifying equalization of pressures while diving

How the PROEAR 2000™ works:

The uniform ear cups fit over the ears and form a watertight seal once properly positioned. Air is pushed into the ear cups through connecting tubing via non-return valves by exhaling through the nose into the facemask. This allows the diver to easily equalize the pressure in the ear cups before it ever reaches the eardrums. In essence, the mask, ear cups and indeed the entire respiratory system become a "closed circuit" equalized air pressure system.

All the diver has to do is gently blow air through his nose to keep the ambient pressure (taken from the regulator) into the mask and ear cups. This creates a kind of "buffering" effect that allows the ears to equalize in 2 stages: the first from the sea pressure into the ear cup, the second from the ear cup onto the eardrum.

The PROEAR 2000™ mask also protects against ear infections, bony calcium deposits in the ear, and cold. It allows for the directionality of sound, allowing the diver (for the first time) to sense where sound is coming from!

Available in Blue, Black and Carbon colors. Prescription lenses can also be inserted for vision correction.
